Teaching and Learning Activities

Before you get started
- Begin this lesson with a reminder for students to look after themselves and their friends. If students feel uncomfortable about the subject matter, they are welcome to take a break for a drink or bathroom visit. Ensure ground rules are established before beginning this activity.
- The purpose of teaching protective behaviours is to increase the safety and wellbeing of everyone in the community. The skills and strategies can be used by students to predict, assess and act appropriately in potential child abuse and family violence situations. Refer to the Guide: Protective behaviours education for further details.
- Self-esteem and confidence of some students may also be an issue during this activity. Be reassuring and support students as they develop the ability to practise assertive “no” statements. This will help students with their resilience and emotional wellbeing development. See the Guide: Resilience and life skills for more information.

- It is possible that a student has been involved in a traumatic experience relating to sexual abuse. Teachers should know and understand the protective interrupting technique and what, why, when and how it is needed and used before facilitating this activity. It is important that teachers are familiar with the Guide: Dealing with disclosures and have a risk management strategy in place.

- Refer to the Guides: STIs/BBVs and Healthy relationships - Gender, power and consent for further content information related to this activity.

Whole Class
Students consider their own personal beliefs and values in regards to sexual intercourse and the influence of alcohol and other drugs.

1. Read out the following scenarios one at a time. Students are to close their eyes and imagine the consequences if this happened to someone they care about, and then indicate if the behaviour is okay using a thumbs up/thumbs down voting system.

It's okay to:

- Flirt with someone at a party.
- Have sex with someone who has been giving him/her lots of alcoholic drinks.
- Have sex with someone who he/she doesn't know when he/she has taken some ecstasy.
- Give someone a drink with a double or triple shot without him/her knowing how much alcohol is in it.
- Go home with someone he/she just met when he/she is feeling really drunk.
- Have sex with someone who has just passed out on the couch.
- Kiss someone he/she finds really attractive when he/she is tipsy.
- Not use a condom when having sex because when the other person says they don’t have any STIs.
- Expect the girl to take responsibility for supplying and using condoms when having sex.
- Not to mention safe sex with your boy/girlfriend until you actually have sex for the first time.
• Okay not to wear a condom when having sex if it’s too tricky to put on.

2. Ask for feedback on each scenario from students who are willing to share.

Independent or Small Group

Students read and discuss a scenario involving sexual intercourse and drug taking, or sexual intercourse and unsafe sex, and identify what they consider to be the safest option and the likely feelings associated with that outcome.

1. Discuss and model the use of the Sexual risk taking decision-making plan.

2. Allocate a scenario from the whole class activity to each pair.

3. The students need to complete the decision making plan by identifying the consequences and the feelings associated with each option of the scenario.

Reflection

1. Students share the results of the previous task.

2. Reflect on the concept of intoxicated sex or unsafe sex by discussing the following questions:
   • Can someone give consent to sex if they are drunk or very out of it?
   • Is it morally right to have sex with someone who is drunk or out of it?
   • Is it legal to have sex with someone who is drunk or out of it?
   • What are some of the things that could go wrong in the scenarios mentioned?
   • What would be your responsibility as a friend in the intoxicated sex scenarios mentioned?
   • If you were drunk or out of it, how might that impact your ability to read non-verbal behaviour accurately?
   • What could you do if you were a friend of someone in the unsafe sex scenarios to help them stay safer?
   • How do you think the person/s would feel in the morning when they realised what they had done in each scenario?
   • How would your peers react if a photo of the intoxicated scenario was posted on Facebook?

3. Individually, have students develop their own lists for what they would consider to be:
Sexual risk taking
Year Learning Activity

- safer sexual activities
- low-risk sexual activities
- high-risk or unsafe sexual activities
